Nest Problems

By Bill and Christine Heale

Unfortunate breeding results vary due to hens becoming ill resulting in eggs chilling or newly hatched chicks dying through not being fed.

It is important to pair up at least four pairs of birds at the same time, so if anything unforeseen happens fertile eggs or newly hatched chicks can be moved to another nest box. If the identification of a chick is lost, this is the least of your worries as each chick saved could be a Best in Show. ♦
